

Visual Analysis

The article uses Geraldine Rendel's travelog as a primary source to learn about the experiences and perspectives of one woman at a particular point in time. In addition to the written text, the article in AramcoWorld also includes another type of primary source: photographs. Working on your own or with a partner, choose one or more of the photos that accompany the article. Answer these questions about it or them:

- What is this a photo of?
- How would you describe what you see?
- What might this photo tell you about the time, place, and people it shows? Do you and your partner interpret what you see in the same way?
- What might account for any differences?

This lesson meets this Common Core Standard:

RH.9-10.9 Compare and contrast treatments of the same topic in several primary and secondary sources.